

Passion

My passion in a nutshell is to build relationships and help people solve problems. While I have worked in Advertising, Banking, Education, and IT, and enjoyed each of my roles, these served as vehicles to fulfill my passion: meeting new people, building relationships, and helping them to solve problems.

Motivation

My motivation is driven by team collaboration, visual and data-driven results, and open communications that facilitate clear direction and expectations that we can all work toward together. Knowing where I am, my role, my objectives, and how to get there, gives me 100% confidence in whatever role I fill. Communication is key.

Example (Millennial Vision, Inc.)

Because of my experience in Web Development, Digital Media, Communications and Business Analytics, I was tasked with a special project at MVi to upgrade the Annual Review fillable PDF to an online, interactive Form, adding in new details, and automatically filling in field values for supervisors, emails, etc. The new form was then used by the entire company and served to better facilitate career development, gain valuable feedback from all departments, and set clear expectations on next steps for each role on the team. This was a huge success, and I would welcome future projects like this wherever my skills and experience are needed.

Goals

My next step in a technical career is to partner with a solid team at one of Utah's amazing tech companies, and leverage my technical and customer service experience, while taking on additional special projects that would benefit my team similar to the above example. Thank you for taking the time to get to know me a little better!
